

Radu Alexandru Vințeanu

Radu Alexandru Vințeanu is a Romanian cultural manager, journalist, and public administrator. Since June 2025, he has served as Manager of the Alexandru and Aristia Aman County Library in Craiova, one of the most important public cultural institutions in southwestern Romania.

He graduated from the Faculty of Law and the Faculty of Political Science and built an extensive professional career in journalism before entering cultural management. Over the years, he worked with both local and national media outlets, serving as a correspondent and contributor for major Romanian news organizations, including Mediafax, and publishing articles in leading national newspapers and media platforms.

As Manager of the County Library, he has focused on strengthening the institution's role as a modern cultural and educational hub, promoting public access to knowledge, cultural heritage, lifelong learning, and community engagement. His professional interests include cultural management, public communication, heritage preservation, media studies, public policy, and institutional development.

Combining experience in journalism, public administration, and cultural leadership, he continues to promote projects that encourage education, civic engagement, cultural participation, and the preservation of Romanian cultural values for future generations.
